If that's the way you feel, don't always blame the bicycle, for it's likely due to a hard, unyielding saddle. Try a MESINGER and you will find it easy riding, and it is also comfortable, healthful, and durable.

PALMER TIRES

ARIDER must concede that no matter how well constructed a bicycle may be, it is useful only so long as the tires are able to carry him to his journey's end...A cheap pair of tires will counteract almost every good point in a wheel.....

The points to be considered in a pneumatic tire are speed, resiliency, easy riding, quickness of repair, and durability.

Speed means a saving of energy to the rider. A rider can coast further, ride up hill easier, and go a greater distance with less fatigue on Palmer Tires than on any other tires.

There is more resiliency, and consequently more life in Palmer Tires than in any other tires. Only those who have tried Palmer Tires know how superior they are in easy riding qualities.

The ordinary puncture does not bother the Palmer Tire rider. Palmer Tires are in a great measure self-healing, and they always carry the rider home.

As for durability, a Palmer Tire will outwear any other tire made. A Chicago wheelman rode one pair over 22,000 miles in 1896, more mileage than the average cyclist covers in a dozen years.

The distinguishing mark of an 1897 high grade bicycle.....will be a pair of Palmer Tires.....
