OUR 25 CENT CLOTH BOOKS

Other Volumes in this Series are:

"Her Ladyship."

By ROBERT McDONALD.

This is the newest story by the author of "A Princess and a Woman" and "In the Reign of Boris." It is altogether different in theme, treating of the experiences of an American girl who marries an English lord. She is a captivating creature, and has a heart capable of boundless affection; but fate plays her a cruel trick, and it is the purpose of this story to tell how she bears up under "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune."

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"Derringforth" (in Two volumes).

By FRANK A. MUNSEY.

In a new edition of "Derringforth" just issued, Mr. Munsey, in a prefatory note, says:

"When should a girl marry?" is the theme of this story. It has to do with a single phase of the question, not the question as a whole. The argument is directed against the theory that a girl should get everything out of life before marrying—should have and see and do and know it all. Marriage in such a case furnishes a girl an escape from dropping back into the second tier, but it does not bring back to her the freshness, the sweetness, the innocence, the faith and enthusiasm that stand for the highest possibilities of happiness.

Cloth and gold. Price 50 cents for the two volumes. When ordered by mail, 20 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"The Affair at Islington."

By MATTHEW WHITE, Jr.

A strong story whose leading characters are a man, his wife, and his old love, an actress—a situation which develops tragedy, terrible and relentless. It also takes up the question of circumstantial evidence, and presents a startling arraignment of the danger it involves. The narrative is strong in cumulative force, and shows in vivid colors the perils of the first step in a downward path.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"The First Families."

By RICHARD MACE.

This is a capital story of contemporary American life, graphic, humorous, and interesting, full of both character and action. Its scenes, all of them dramatic, pass from a semi-Bohemian set in New York to the quiet and dignified surroundings of an old country family in Virginia. The heroine is a charming woman, but of no social pretensions, and her tilts with the F. F. V.'s are deliciously set forth. But the story is by no means all comedy, and the strain of pathos works up to an extremely well managed dénouement.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"Under Fire."

By FRANK A. MUNSEY.

This was Mr. Munsey's first long story. It was published in THE ARGOSY in 1885, at a time when there was little cash in the treasury with which to buy stories—and stories we had to have. It was written at night, after the long day's work in the business office and editorial rooms. The story took the place of one for which we would have had to pay $500, a sum that went a long way in keeping THE ARGOSY afloat.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"Afloat in a Great City."

By FRANK A. MUNSEY.

This was Mr. Munsey's second long story. It was published in THE ARGOSY serially in 1886, and marked the turning point in THE ARGOSY's fortunes. THE ARGOSY was then a little more than three years old, and had not yet reached a paying basis, closely as it had been managed. But with the publication of "Afloat in a Great City" the first substantial ray of sunshine broke upon the publisher's vision.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"The Boy Broker."

By FRANK A. MUNSEY.

This was Mr. Munsey's third long story. It was published in THE ARGOSY serially in the spring of 1887, quickly following "Afloat in a Great City." It was "Afloat in a Great City" that lifted THE ARGOSY to the paying point; it was "The Boy Broker" that lifted it to an important position among publications of its class.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"In the Reign of Boris."

By ROBERT McDONALD.

This story is a sequel to "A Princess and a Woman," and is a striking narrative of the romantic school, bristling with action. When printed in serial form it called forth many expressions of interest. It is the sort of story that will furnish one a delightful evening's entertainment, and the author has been beset with requests for the dramatic rights.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.

"A Princess and a Woman."

By ROBERT McDONALD.

A stirring story of adventure in the eastern countries of Europe. The princess is a Russian and the hero a young American, an attaché of the legation in St. Petersburg, thus presenting a reversal of the usual order of things in international love affairs.

Cloth and gold. Price 25 cents. When ordered by mail, 10 cents should be added for postage and packing.
